Editorial Note

On behalf of the Editorial Board of the Journal “Society and Culture Development in India” (SCDI) I am proud to introduce the first issue of this peer-reviewed journal. The present issue comprises a handful of articles centring on a given theme. The Journal intends to flourish and to keep up the principles in research and practice thereby giving platform and chance to introduce evidences based study and analytical assessment of research as well. SCDI provides an interdisciplinary forum for the publication of theoretical perspectives, research findings, case studies, policy analyses and normative critiques on the issues, problems and policies of both mainstream and alternative approaches to development.

SCDI welcomes original articles on issues arising at the intersection of nations, states, civil societies, and global institutions and processes. The editors are particularly interested in article manuscripts dealing with changing patterns in world economic and political institutions; analysis of ethnic groups, social classes, religions, personal networks, and special interests; changes in mass culture, propaganda, and technologies of communication and their social effects; and the impact of social transformations on the changing order of public and private life. The journal is interdisciplinary in orientation and international in scope, and is not tethered to particular theoretical or research traditions. The journal presents material of varying length, from research notes to article-length monographs.

I would welcome your valuable contributions and suggestions to take SCDI so that it attains to further heights.

I would like to acknowledge the Odisha Higher Education Program for Excellence and Equity (OHEPEE), Government of Odisha, India for their support through World Bank
